Dear Garry and Dave

Thank you for your letter in which you seek assurances about my commitments to the wellbeing of staff of the House of Commons if I am elected Speaker.

I know how busy you and your members are so I will not overload you with my full election manifesto!

In short - the House of Commons is more than a place of work, it is a community and at the heart of our community must be respect.

This means making Parliament a dignified place of work whilst placing the health and wellbeing of all who work here at the top of the agenda.

If elected I commit to the following pledges to our valuable workforce:

- Full implementation of the the Independent Complaints and Grievance Policy code of conduct for House and Members' staff within 6 months – if not sooner, with regular reviews on the progress made and effectiveness
- Review the Speaker's Commission and update its composition including staff representation
- Encourage all Members and staff undertake, as I have done, training on bullying and harassment

Deputy Speaker, Chairman of Ways and Means

Member of Parliament for Chorley

- Establish an onsite GP and provide vital mental health care services available for all staff to meet the growing needs of working in a high-pressure working environment away from home

There is a huge amount of work to be done by the new Speaker and if elected I would continue to work with and meet with all staff representative bodies - as I have done in my role as Deputy Speaker.

Yours sincerely,
