

Are you about to retire?

Here's why you should stay in Prospect...

your voice in retirement

Your future in

I am retiring, why should I stay with Prospect?

If you're about to retire, you can continue to receive many of the services you value from Prospect by becoming a retired member. However you do need to continue your membership within six months of retiring to be eligible for the benefits of retired membership. These include:

- access to headquarters advice
- a 24-hour helpline giving free legal advice on non-employment issues
- access to a network of retired member area groups co-ordinated by area representatives
- pensions advice
- support from the union's benevolent fundour free personal injury scheme including asbestos related industrial diseases for members and immediate family
- access to Prospect membership benefits, including a free will-writing service provided by our legal partners
- advice on entitlement to state benefits

I'm taking early retirement at age 55. Can I still become a retired member? ”

YES!

Any member retiring from employment, whether because of age, sickness or redundancy, can become a retired member.

Pensions advice and support

Prospect will continue to advise on your current and future pension entitlements. We can represent you in any dispute with your former employer over your pension, for example dealing with the pension administrator such as MyCSP or with the social security appeal tribunal. Prospect expertise is based on our knowledge and dealings with more than 120 pension schemes in both the private and public sectors and our experience of dealing with personal cases taken out on behalf of members.

Limitations

Retired members are not entitled to work-related benefits, such as advice on employment rights, personal injury arising from work undertaken while in retired membership. If you decide to take up paid employment after you retire and want to be covered for these issues, you would need to revert to full Prospect membership.

Retired members do not have access to Prospect's death benefit scheme.

How much do I pay?

As a retired member, irrespective of the age you retire, you pay a low monthly subscription rate (£3.56 in 2018/19) which can also be paid annually. If you are aged 55 or over, you can become a life member by paying a one-off lump sum which is ten times the annual rate. You can check the current rates at <https://members.prospect.org.uk/your-prospect/reps/applicationforms>.

If you retire under age 55, you can pay monthly or annually until you reach 55, when you can then buy life membership or just continue with monthly or annual payments.
